ANGER MANAGEMENT

Remember, it's okay to get angry. What is important is how your emotions are expressed. Below some are some tips for anger management.
How has anger interfered with your life? What would you like to change?
Have do you become because and well as a sum of (Tomical since one on your statements along the discuss timble and How do you know when you are getting angry? (Typical signs are an upset stomach, clenched jaw, tightened first.) If you feel are beginning to get engry, you can do semething before the situation becomes too topics and leads fist.) If you feel are beginning to get angry, you can do something before the situation becomes too tense and leads to negative consequences.
Write your typical signs here:
Take time to cool down. Find an activity or spend time away from the situation so you are able to calm down and handle the situation in a way that does not have negative consequences.
Remember to use communication skills to help express how you feel, while trying to see how the other person feels. Try to come to a common solution instead of forcing your decisions on someone else. See the Communications Skills sheet.

Try to come from the other person's perspective. Why does the person feel the way he or she does?