Glossary of Motivational Interviewing Terms

Ability—A form of client preparatory change talk that reflects perceived personal capability of making a change; typical words include can, could, and able.

Absolute Worth—One of four aspects of acceptance as a component of MI spirit, prizing the inherent value and potential of every human being.

Acceptance—One of four central components of the underlying spirit of MI by which the interviewer communicates absolute worth, accurate empathy, affirmation, and autonomy support.

Accurate Empathy—The skill of perceiving and reflecting back another person’s meaning; one of four aspects of acceptance as a component of MI spirit.

Activation Language—A form of client mobilizing change talk that expresses disposition toward action, but falls short of commitment language; typical words include ready, willing, considering.

Affirmation—One of four aspects of acceptance as a component of MI spirit, by which the counselor accentuates the positive, seeking and acknowledging a person’s strengths and efforts.

Affirming—An interviewer statement valuing a positive client attribute or behavior.

Agenda Mapping—A short focusing metaconversation in which you step back with the client to choose a direction from among several options.

Agreement with a Twist—A reflection, affirmation, or accord followed by a reframe.

Ambivalence—The simultaneous presence of competing motivations for and against change.

Amplified Reflection—A response in which the interviewer reflects back the client’s content with greater intensity than the client had expressed; one form of response to client sustain talk or discord.

Apologizing—A way of responding to discord by taking partial responsibility.

Assessment Feedback—Providing a client with personal feedback of findings from an evaluation, often in relation to normative ranges; see Motivational Enhancement Therapy.

Assessment Trap—The clinical error of beginning consultation with expert information gathering at the cost of not listening to the client’s concerns. See also Question–Answer Trap.

Autonomy Support—One of four aspects of acceptance as a component of MI spirit, by which the interviewer accepts and confirms the client’s irrevocable right to self-determination and choice.

Blaming Trap—The clinical error of focusing on blame or fault-finding rather than change.
Bouquet—A particular kind of summary that collects and emphasizes the client’s change talk.

Brainstorming—Generating options without initially critiquing them.

CATs—An acronym for three subtypes of client mobilizing change talk: Commitment, Activation, and Taking Steps.

Change Goal—A specific target for change in motivational interviewing; typically a particular behavior change, although it may also be a broader goal (e.g., glycemic control) toward which there are multiple avenues of approach.

Change Plan—A specific scheme to implement a change goal.

Change Ruler—A rating scale, usually 0–10, used to assess a client’s motivation for a particular change; see Confidence Ruler and Importance Ruler.

Chat Trap—The clinical error of engaging in excessive small talk and informal chat that does not further the processes of engaging, focusing, evoking, and planning.

Client-centered Counseling—See Person-centered Counseling.

Closed Question—A question that asks for yes/no, a short answer, or specific information.

Coaching—The process of helping someone to acquire skill.

Collaboration—See Partnership.

Collecting Summary—A special form of reflection that pulls together a series of interrelated items that the person has offered. See also Summary.

Coming Alongside—A response to persistent sustain talk or discord in which the interviewer accepts and reflects the client’s theme.

Commitment Language—A form of client mobilizing change talk that reflects intention or disposition to carry out change; common verbs include will, do, going to.

Compassion—one of four central components of the underlying spirit of MI by which the interviewer acts benevolently to promote the client’s welfare, giving priority to the client’s needs.

Complex Reflection—An interviewer reflection that adds additional or different meaning beyond what the client has just said; a guess as to what the client may have meant.

Confidence Ruler—A scale (typically 0–10) on which clients are asked to rate their level of confidence in their ability to make a particular change.

Confidence Talk—Change talk that particularly bespeaks ability to change.

Confront—(1) as a goal: to come face to face with one’s current situation and experience; (2) as a practice: an MI-inconsistent interviewer response such as warning, disagreeing, or arguing.
Continuing the Paragraph—A method of reflective listening in which the counselor offers what might be the next (as yet unspoken) sentence in the client’s paragraph.

DARN—An acronym for four subtypes of client preparatory change talk: Desire, Ability, Reason, and Need.

Decisional Balance—A choice-focused technique that can be used when counseling with neutrality, devoting equal exploration to the pros and cons of change or of a specific plan.

Depth of Reflection—The extent to which a reflection contains more than the literal content of what a person has already said. See also Complex Reflection.

Desire—A form of client preparatory change talk that reflects a preference for change; typical verbs include want, wish, and like.

Directing—A natural communication style that involves telling, leading, providing advice, information, or instruction.

Direction—The extent to which an interviewer maintains in-session momentum toward a change goal.

Discord—Interpersonal behavior that reflects dissonance in the working relationship; sustain talk does not in itself constitute discord; examples include arguing, interrupting, discounting, or ignoring.

Discrepancy—The distance between the status quo and one or more client change goals.

Docere—(Latin verb infinitive) To inform, in the sense of installing knowledge, wisdom, insight; etymologic root of doctrine, indoctrinate, docent, and doctor.

Double-Sided Reflection—An interviewer reflection that includes both client sustain talk and change talk, usually with the conjunction “and.”

Ducere—(Latin verb infinitive) To elicit or draw out; a Socratic approach; etymologic root of education (e ducere); compare with Docere.

Elaboration—An interviewer response to client change talk, asking for additional detail, clarification, or example.

Elicit–provide–elicit—An information exchange process that begins and ends with exploring the client’s own experience to frame whatever information is being provided to the client.

Empathy—The extent to which an interviewer communicates accurate understanding of the client’s perspectives and experience; most commonly manifested as reflection.

Emphasizing Personal Control—An interviewer statement directly expressing autonomy support, acknowledging the client’s ability for choice and self-determination.

Engaging—The first of four fundamental processes in MI, the process of establishing a mutually trusting and respectful helping relationship.

Envisioning—Client speech that reflects the client imagining having made a change.
Equipoise—The clinician’s decision to counsel with neutrality in a way that consciously avoids guiding a client toward one particular choice or change and instead explores the available options equally.

Evocation—One of four central components of the underlying spirit of MI by which the interviewer elicits the client’s own perspectives and motivation. See also Ducere.

Evocative Questions—Strategic open questions the natural answer to which is change talk.

Evoking—The third of four fundamental processes of MI, which involves eliciting the person’s own motivation for a particular change.

Expert Trap—The clinical error of assuming and communicating that the counselor has the best answers to the client’s problems.

Exploring Goals and Values—A strategy for evoking change talk by having people describe their most important life goals or values.

Focusing—The second of four fundamental processes of MI, which involves clarifying a particular goal or direction for change.

Following—A natural communication style that involves listening to and following along with the other’s experience without inserting one’s own material.

Formulation—Developing a shared picture or hypothesis regarding the client’s situation and how it might be addressed.

FRAMES—An acronym summarizing six components commonly found in effective brief interventions for alcohol problems: Feedback, Responsibility, Advice, Menu of options, Empathy, and Self-efficacy.

Goal Attainment Scaling—A method originally developed by Thomas Kiresuk for evaluating treatment outcomes across a range of problem areas.

Goldilocks Principle—In order to be motivating, a discrepancy should be not too large or too small.

Guiding—A natural communication style for helping others find their way, combining some elements of both directing and following.

Implementation Intention—A stated intention or commitment to take a specific action.

Importance Ruler—A scale (typically 0–10) on which clients are asked to rate the importance of making a particular change.

Integrity—To behave in a manner that is consistent with and fulfills one’s core values.

Intrinsic Motivation—The disposition and enactment of behavior for its consistency with personal goals and values.

Key Question—A particular form of question offered after a recapitulation at the transition from evoking to planning, that seeks to elicit mobilizing change talk.
Labeling Trap—The clinical error of engaging in unproductive struggles to persuade clients to accept a label or diagnosis.

Lagom—(Swedish) Just right; not too large, not too small. See also Goldilocks Principle.

Linking Summary—A special form of reflection that connects what the person has just said with something you remember from prior conversation. See also Summary.

Looking Back—A strategy for evoking client change talk, exploring a better time in the past.

Looking Forward—A strategy for evoking client change talk, exploring a possible better future that the client hopes for or imagines, or anticipating the future consequences of not changing.

Menschenbild (German)—One’s fundamental view of human nature.

MET—An acronym for Motivational Enhancement Therapy.

MIA–STEP—A package of training materials for MI supervisors, produced by the U.S. Center for Substance Abuse Treatment.

MISC—The Motivational Interviewing Skill Code, introduced by Miller and Mount as the first system for coding client and interviewer utterances within motivational interviewing.

MITI—The Motivational Interviewing Treatment Integrity coding system, simplified from the MISC and focusing only on interviewer responses, to document fidelity in MI delivery.

Mobilizing Change Talk—A subtype of client change talk that expresses or implies action to change; examples are commitment, activation language, and taking steps.

Motivational Enhancement Therapy (MET)—A combination of motivational interviewing with assessment feedback, originally developed and tested in Project MATCH.

Motivational Interviewing—
- Lay definition: A collaborative conversation style for strengthening a person’s own motivation and commitment to change.
- Clinical definition: A person-centered counseling style for addressing the common problem of ambivalence about change.
- Technical definition: A collaborative, goal-oriented style of communication with particular attention to the language of change, designed to strengthen personal motivation for and commitment to a specific goal by eliciting and exploring the person’s own reasons for change within an atmosphere of acceptance and compassion.

Need—A form of client preparatory change talk that expresses an imperative for change without specifying a particular reason. Common verbs include need, have to, got to, must.

OARS—An acronym for four basic client-centered communication skills: Open question, Affirmation, Reflection, and Summary.

5
Open Question—A question that offers the client broad latitude and choice in how to respond; compare with Closed Question.

Orienting—The process of finding a direction for change when the focus of consultation is unclear. See also Focusing.

Overshooting—A reflection that adds intensity to the content or emotion expressed by a client. See also Amplified Reflection.

Partnership—One of four central components of the underlying spirit of MI by which the interviewer functions as a partner or companion, collaborating with the client’s own expertise.

Path Mapping—The process of choosing a change plan when there are several possible routes toward the goal.

Permission—Obtaining by the interviewer of client assent before providing advice or information.

Person-centered Counseling—A therapeutic approach introduced by psychologist Carl Rogers in which people explore their own experience within a supportive, empathic, and accepting relationship; also called client-centered counseling.

Phase 1—A term used in prior editions of Motivational Interviewing to describe the earlier “uphill” period of engaging, guiding, and evoking, in which the general goal is to elicit and strengthen client motivation for change.

Phase 2—A term used in prior editions of Motivational Interviewing to describe the latter “downhill” period of planning in which the general goal is to elicit and strengthen commitment to a change goal and to negotiate a specific change plan.

Planning—The fourth fundamental process of MI, which involves developing a specific change plan that the client is willing to implement.

Prefacing—A specific form of permission in which the interviewer does not directly ask the client’s leave to provide information or advice, but instead precedes it with an autonomy support statement.

Premature Focus Trap—The clinical error of focusing before engaging, trying to direct before you have established a working collaboration and negotiated common goals.

Preparatory Change Talk—A subtype of client change talk that expresses motivations for change without stating or implying specific intent or commitment to do it; examples are desire, ability, reason, and need.

Q Sorting—A technique developed by William Stephenson, a colleague of Carl Rogers, in which a person sorts cards describing attributes into piles ranging from “not like me” to “very much like me.”

Querying Extremes—A strategy for evoking change talk by asking clients to imagine best consequences of change or worst consequences of status quo.
Question–Answer Trap—The clinical error of asking too many questions, leaving the client in the passive role of answering them. See also Assessment Trap.

Reactance—The natural human tendency to reassert one’s freedom when it appears to be threatened.

Readiness Ruler—See Change Ruler.

Reason—A form of client preparatory change talk that describes a specific if–then motive for change.

Recapitulation—A bouquet summary offered at the transition from evoking to planning, drawing together the client’s change talk.

Reflective Listening—The skill of “active” listening whereby the counselor seeks to understand the client’s subjective experience, offering reflections as guesses about the person’s meaning. See also Accurate Empathy.

Reflection—An interviewer statement intended to mirror meaning (explicit or implicit) of preceding client speech. See also Simple Reflection, Complex Reflection.

Reframe—An interviewer statement that invites the client to consider a different interpretation of what has been said.

Resistance—A term previously used in MI, now deconstructed into its components: sustain talk and discord.

Righting Reflex—The natural desire of helpers to set things right, to prevent harm and promote client welfare.

Running Head Start—A strategy for eliciting client change talk in which the interviewer first explores perceived “good things” about the status quo, in order to then query the “not-so-good things.”

Self-Actualization—The pursuit and realization of one’s core values—becoming what one is meant to be. See also Telos.

Self-Disclosure—Sharing something of oneself that is true when there is good reason to expect that it will be helpful to the client.

Self-Efficacy—A client’s perceived ability to successfully achieve a particular goal or perform a particular task; term introduced by Albert Bandura.

Self-Esteem—A client’s general level of perceived worth.

Self-Motivational Statement—See Change Talk.

Self-Regulation—The ability to develop a plan of one’s own and to implement behavior in order to carry it out.

Shifting Focus—A way of responding to discord by redirecting attention and discussion to a less contentious topic or perspective.
Simple Reflection—A reflection that contains little or no additional content beyond what the client has said.

Smoke Alarms—Interpersonal signals of discord in the working alliance.

Spirit—The underlying set of mind and heart within which MI is practiced, including partnership, acceptance, compassion, and evocation.

Stages of Change—Within the transtheoretical model of change, a sequence of steps through which people pass in the change process: precontemplation, contemplation, preparation, action, and maintenance.

Status Quo—The current state of affairs without change.

Summary—A reflection that draws together content from two or more prior client statements. See also Collecting Summary, Linking Summary, Transitional Summary.

Sustain Talk—Any client speech that favors status quo rather than movement toward a change goal.

Taking Steps—A form of client mobilizing change talk that describes an action or step already taken toward change.

Telos—(Greek) The natural, mature end state of an organism toward which it grows, given optimal conditions.

Transitional Summary—A special form of reflection to wrap up a task or session by pulling together what seems important and signal a shift to something new.

Transtheoretical Model—A complex model of change developed by James Prochaska and Carlo DiClemente, one part of which describes stages of change.

Undershooting—A reflection that diminishes or understates the intensity of the content or emotion expressed by a client.

Values—A person’s core goals or standards that provide meaning and direction in life.

Values Sorting—A technique used by Milton Rokeach and others, in which a person gives priority rankings to various values, for example, by sorting cards into piles ranging from “not at all important” to “most important.”

Working Alliance—The quality of the collaborative relationship between client and counselor, which tends to predict client retention and outcome.
